

Root Cause Analysis: Why the American Jewish World Seems Disinterested in the Future of Israel

Virtually every written today concerning Israel and American jewelry represents a ringing of hands over those so-called “progressive Jews” who vote Democratic, embrace the rejectionist policies of people like presidential hopeful Bernie Sanders and who otherwise disengage from the plight facing Israel every day. One only needs to compare the reaction of the United States to the rocket and bombing attacks over England during World War II, and the rage expressed by the United States, to the non-existence negative reaction to hundreds and thousands of rockets fired by Hamas at Southern Israel over a period of a much shorter span of time than the German Butz Creek (not sure what you said here) over England. On a daily basis, those of us who support Israel are asked by our non-Jewish friends why Jewish people seem to have turned their back on Israel? All kinds of arcane and essentially worthless answers are given. Many authors come close to the facts by asserting that the Jewish people have given up Judaism for Liberalism or Leftism. Others blame the poor public relations of the Jewish State or its advocates in contradistinction to the empathy generated by photographs of suffering Arabs in Gaza or on the west bank of the Jordan River. Even Fox News has a reporter stationed not in Israel to watch the downpour of Islamic Jihad rockets but rather the reporter is stationed in Gaza City where doubtless he will be much safer since the Israelis must be so careful with their attacks.

It is borderline humorous to contemplate that both Presidents Obama and Trump bragged about and were lauded by their supporters for the targeted killing
